Mill Supts. and Foremen Hear Talk

Employment and Safety Departments Placed Over One Head--Mr. Snyder Speaks at Luncheon

The superintendents and foremen of the Pittsburgh Steel company were honored yesterday with the presence of Clayton Snyder, assistant treasurer of the company and listened to an excellent talk by him at the noon hour. The lunch was served in the club room of the mill by the lunch committee, composed of workmen in the plant. About sixty-five were present all of whom were superintendents and foremen of the various departments.

When the lunch was over General Superintendent C. J. Mogan made a few introductory remarks and introduced Mr. Snyder who talked for half an hour or more of the future plans of the company with regard to the organization of several departments under one head, which will include compensation, employment, safety and the welfare department and Mr. J. M. Hennigan, it was announced, would have charge of all of the work of the newly organized department.

The arrangement is believed to be a step in the right direction, not only with regard to the employment of men, but also in the protection of all persons employed by the company. It will provide a greater system of safety and will have the cooperation and support of every superintendent and foreman in the big plant.

The new duties imposed upon Mr. Hennigan are in addition to his duties as paymaster and will be cared for along with his present work. The luncheon was thoroughly enjoyed and those who had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Snyder and listening to his instructive talk were greatly pleased as well as benefitted.

Slight Auto Accident This Morning

Miss Marian Tanzer had a slight misfortune while driving her father's automobile today and was somewhat injured. A Ford was coming ing down Knox avenue while Miss Tanzer was approaching Knox from McKee Way. In order to avert a collision Miss Tanzer directed her machine toward the curb and it struck a telegraph pole. Flying glass from the windshield was the cause of a slight flesh wound. There were several other passengers in the machine but they were not injured, but some damage resulted to the machine.

Assessors Busy

Assessors throughout the country are having considerable difficulty in having the prospective voters place their names on the books. Despite the fact that this is the last day to pay the 50 cents poll tax to entitle the voter to the privilege of the ballot, not one woman has called at the office of Tax Collector Woodward to take out the required receipt. The assessors at the several polling places report that there is very little interest taken by the women. Thruout the entire country the same interest in manifested and many of those who have been active in suffrage for years have failed to take the required interest to see that a pretty general registration results.

HUSBANDS AND WIVES

A New York woman has just brought suit for divorce on the ground that her "husband is so annoying she finds it impossible to live with him without becoming a nervous wreck," and one of the faults she finds is that he "requires her to pick up his garments and to gather up his soiled collars," to which hubby replies that he deems "personal services of a wife to be a part of the duties imposed by the marriage contract," thereby raising in public an issue that has been fought to a frazzle privately in about half the households of the land.

One of the privileges which the American husband regards as his by divine dispensation is to drop his clothing where it pleases him to discard it, and to let his collars lie on the bureau in sublime faith that a careful housewife will remove them to the laundry bag in ample time to have them restored to him in proper season, spotless and stiff from the tub and the iron. And it is likewise the complaint of the average housewife that she has "the most careless and slovenly husband in the world." Doubtless, fellow benedict, you have some first hand information of your own on that score. Maybe, at rare intervals you have a guilty pang, as you hustle down to breakfast, over the wreck and ruin you have left for your wife to clean up, but was it strong enough to induce you to turn about and do the "dirty work" yourself? It was not. Maybe you virtuously resolved to be more careful in the future, but down in your heart you knew you would do the same thing again next day.

That's the kind of husbands most of us are, but at that wives are somewhat to blame, bless 'em. As soon as a man enters his home he is treated as though the entire interior of the domestic establishment were a mystery to him and he is given the impression that if it were not for the woman of the house he would probably starve to death or go about with so few clothes that he would be arrested by the first policeman he passed. Women like to feel that men are helpless without them. They love to mother them, to do for them and to scold them for their careless habits. They would be lost if there were no garments to put away, no collars to gather up. And, at all events, we have always had sympathy for those wives who have husbands who pride themselves on being effeminately neat. Mostly they are of the "careful dresser" type, run to lavender ties and pink underwear and have a penchant for ogling foolish young girls

We suspect there is something back of the New York lady's divorce suit she has not made public, or that she is so utterly hopeless her husband would be foolish to contest her suit. Her complaints are natural enough, but they are not of the divorce court variety.

THIS SAD TRAGEDY SHOULD BE A LESSON

Only yesterday this paper carried a news item of the tragic end of a local boy through a motorcycle accident. The boy had been hanging on behind a buggy and let loose his hold and stepped directly in front of the fast approaching machine. It seems more an act of Providence than anything else that more such accidents do not occur. Boys hang on behind vehicles and follow ice wagons and use the streets and highways for playgrounds.

Sometimes it is done with knowledge of parents and other times out of sight of the parents. Childhood is not aware of danger. It moves without thought and accidents result. But society does not excuse the speed demon regardless of where in the fault lies. No person has a right to usurp the highways for the thrill that comes through speed.

Motorcycles are as dangerous on the highways as a gun in the hands of a reckless person and the only reason that more deaths do not result is because no person happens in the way. With the best of speed observation and the best of care, accidents will happen, but out of this recent tragedy a general lesson should be learned. Move cautiously and be on the lookout for those who may step in the pathway at any time.

THE FARM HORSE

Out west they say the farm horse is passing rapidly, the tractor having taken its place, but here in Pennsylvania farm horses are bringing record prices and are in much demand. The why of it is simple. The West, with its broad plains and gently undulating country, is far more adaptable to the motor-driven farm vehicles or machine than the fields of Pennsylvania with their steep slopes and many difficult grades. In this state the farm horse will continue to hold his own, even though large numbers of tractors are being sold to farmers. There is a place for each in the economy of the Pennsylvania farm, with no probability that either ever will be quite pushed off the agricultural map.

Women with handsome rings to display do not always do embroidery purely because they want to get the fancy work done.

White Sox Have Magic Line of Quality

By L. R. BLANCHARD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Sept. 1—The Chicago White Sox, crippled and short a stellar staff of pitchers, have one hall-mark of championship. Perhaps this mark explains why a club, apparently fatally weak in vital points has kept up in the race the last two years.

The hall-mark is the straight line from catcher to centerfield. If any club ever justified the ancient theory or superstition that that straight line means a good club, the Sox have done it.

Ray Schalk, the most spectacular if not the best catcher in the game; three better-than-ordinary pitchers in Cicotte, Williams and Kerr to take the box; Eddie Collins the perennial peer of second basemen, and "Hap" Felsch probably the surest outfielder in the major leagues—those men comprise the miracle line.

The Sox are not so weak as appears at first glance. Their third baseman, Buck Weaver, must be ranked with the greatest "Swede" Risberg as a shortstop is coming fast offensively and defensively and in Joe Jackson the Sox have one of the big berthas of the game.

The weakness has been a shortage of regularly winning pitchers and at first base. The defection of Chick Grandil robbed the Sox of a clever fielder and a dangerous hitter. His place has been taken this year by Ted Jourdan, a flashy fielder but hardly of big league class as a batter, and John Collins, outfielder.

Special Meeting to Be Held at Reunion

The popularizing of the public library is urged by Senator Warren G. Harding, the Republican nominee for president, in giving his endorsement to the "Books for Everybody" movement of the American Library Association, which aims to promote the development of public library service throughout America. In a letter to Carl P. Vitz of the Cleveland Public Library, Senator Harding has declared himself willing to give any support to the cause.

"I very gladly and sincerely commend the program of the American Library Association as outlined," Senator Harding wrote, "and I am tremendously interested in the work which is being done in its extension. It has been said that 'much reading maketh a full man,' and the thought involved in that quotation is very important to our future development.

"I shall be glad to aid in the work of extending library facilities to all of our citizens everywhere and I would like to express the hope that your association may lend itself to the 'popularizing' of the library, if I may express the idea which I have in mind. There should be a minimum of red tape in the extension of library opportunities and so far as possible a cordial tender of aid to intelligence use of books and their interpretation. You may confidently count on me for any support it is in my power to give to advance the cause you represent."

Promote Public Library Service

In accordance with the request of Dr. A. E McKinley, of Pennsylvania, secretary of the National Association of State War History Commissions, who asked that the Virginia War History Commission use the first annual reunion of the Eighth Division in Richmond on September 4th, 5th and 6th as the means for the collection of complete data on the operations of that command, the Virginia body has arranged a special meeting to be held during the reunion.

This conference will be held on the evening of the first day of the convention, and the commissioners from West Virginia and Pennsylvania have been invited to attend it. The presence of the historical committee of the Eighth Division, together with any man of the division who is interested in this work, has been especially requested. Efforts will be made to collect all company, battalion, regimental, brigade and divisional histories and orders.

Governor Westmoreland Davis, assisted by Mrs. Davis, will entertain the veterans on the evening of their first day in Richmond at an informal public reception given in their honor. This is a new feature, which has just been added to the program of the reunion. No invitations to the affair will be issued, but all members of the division and their friends will be invited to be present.

Arrangements have been made by the reunion committee in Richmond with the railroads to open an information booth at headquarters of the committee in one of the armories, where Pullman reservation may be made and all desired information as to the arrival and departure of trains may be obtained. This booth will prove a great convenience to those attending the reunion, and will greatly simplify the making of arrangements for their return home.

WOMAN'S BEAUTY NO SECRET
It all lies in the care she bestows upon herself and in keeping at bay those dread ills peculiar to her sex. The flashing eye, the elastic step and the clear complexion never accompany organic troubles. The distressed expression, lassitude, headaches and mental depression are only the tell-tale symptoms. Women so troubled should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that simple remedy made from roots and herbs, and restore their health to a normal condition.

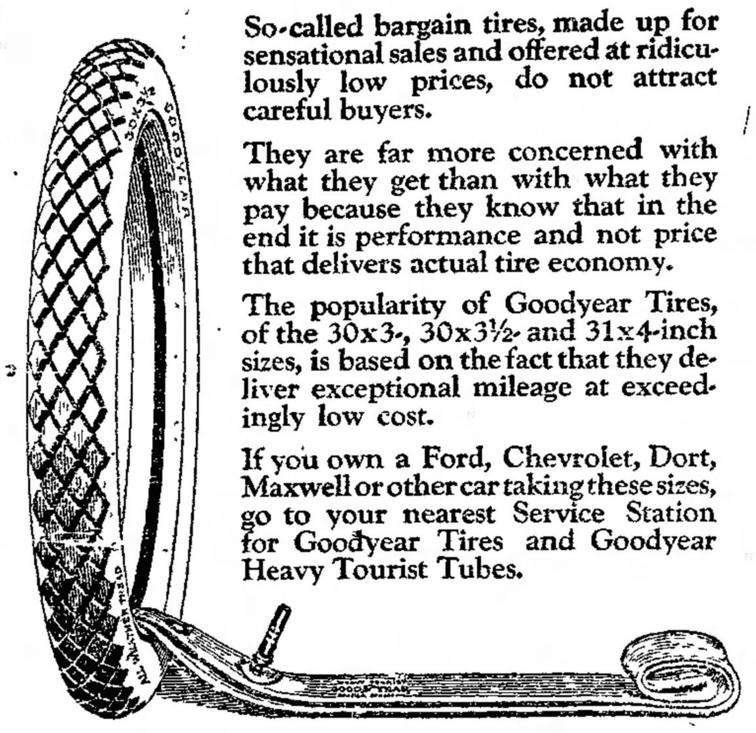
The Economy of Using Goodyear Small Car Tires

So-called bargain tires, made up for sensational sales and offered at ridiculously low prices, do not attract careful buyers.

They are far more concerned with what they get than with what they pay because they know that in the end it is performance and not price that delivers actual tire economy.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they deliver exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.



30 x 3½ Goodyear Double Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread $23.50

30 x 3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30 x 3½ size in waterproof bag $4.50

Rowing Greatest Sport

By HENRY L. FARRELL

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Antwerp, Aug 19—In a haze that hung over the Polo grounds like a great gray blanket late last November a big straight, broad-shouldered boy, nearly descernable in the fog plowed through mud ankle deep and booted two fields goals that gave the Navy a 6 to 0 victory over the Army

Braced against the footboard in the Navy shell, the same right foot shoved 180-lbs., of Iowa brawn against the oar that stroked the Navy crew through a victorious sweep of American water that has brought the eight here to contest for the world's championship

The right-foot belongs to Clyde W King, the 22-year old son of a wealthy Grinnell Iowa rancher, who preferred to work his way through college rather than accept the easier route via a proud parent's check

King, whose name is in keeping with his rank among the midshipmen, dreamt, hoped and aspired to be a great athlete when he was running around Lodora, Iowa, in short trousers But he was a puny little lad and couldn't stand the gaff of even the kid games in the neighborhood.

When he was eight years old his father sent him to his ranch in Saskatchewan and he roughed it there for three years returning home a youngster with a man's physique

He played football and basket ball and football in high school and then entered Grinnel College

In keeping with a resolve to work his way through school he bought a shoe shining parlor in the little college town from a Greek for $300. He decorated the place with pennants and college trimmings and advertised, making a specialty of fair co-ed trade

His business grew until his staff of negro boys was swamped and then he took a hand at shining the leathers himself.

He made close to $1700 a year for two years and then sold the business for $600 going from there to Marion (Ala.) Institute where he prepared for Annapolis

His dream of success in athletics came in undreamt proportions to the Academy.

Twice he was stroked the crew and twice he has won the "N" for football. He has two years more to go and plans to go out next winter for the basketball team

Considering the condition of the field in New York during the game last year, the feat of this King in kicking two difficult goals was remarkable when it is considered that he played through the game with a charley horse in his right leg that hurt "worse than a toothache"

"When I kicked off to the Army on the first play, my leg hurt so badly I thought I would have to quit. But when we got into action I got my mind off it," he says

He was in the hospital at the acid mine for a month after the game

"Of all sports I think rowing is the greatest," he says. "The big crowds and the joy of personal contact bring big thrills in football, but rowing is the greatest because it is a man's game in every sense of the word"

responsibility, resting upon our shoulders, manifestly would have been undeniable. Undoubtedly the league council, in 'advising upon the means' by which the obligations to Poland should be fulfilled, as provided in the covenant, would have so held, and probably the conscience of America, certainly the opinion of the world, would have sustained that judgment.

"The conclusion that our country might now be confronted by such a situation, if the Senate had ratified the league covenant, requires no stretch of the imagination. None can deny that it is possible. To many candid minds, as to my own, such a distressing situation will seem highly probable. Let us assume that the ratification had taken place. Let us assume, further, that the performance of the allotted task required the waging of war upon the Russian people, as, of course, it would, what would result; what would of necessity have to result? Nothing necessarily, we are glibly informed, since only the Congress can declare war, and the Congress might reject the appeal of the executive. But would the Congress do that? Could the Congress do that without staining indelibly the honor of the nation?

Answer Is "No."

"I answer 'No,' and I say it not on my own authority alone. Back of my judgment stands the President of the United States. Upon that point there is first-hand information. In the course of the discussion which took place at the meeting of the President and the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations I raised the question by stating a hypothetical case precisely analogous to that which I have depicted, and then inquired whether we might not rightfully be regarded as a perfidious people if we should fail to contribute an armed force, if called upon to do so. The President first replied, as I thought somewhat evasively, that we would be our own judges as to whether we were obliged in those circumstances to act in that way or not. Pressed further, however, in response to a query incorporating the assumption that 'the case provided for and prescribed had arisen' and that 'the extraneous attack did exist precisely as it does exist today in Poland,' the President admitted specifically that 'we would be untrue if we did not keep our word.'

"Replying further to a question which perhaps I ought not to have considered necessary, the President pronounced a moral obligation 'of course, superior to a legal obligation' and of 'a greater binding force.'

"What, then, becomes of the argument that Congress, not the President, in this instance at any rate, might 'keep us out of war?' Technically, of course, it could do so. Morally, with equal certainty, it could not do so nor would it ever do so. The American people would never permit a repudiation of a debt of honor.

"Am I not right, my countrymen, in saying that we needed only the outbreak of war between Poland and Russia to make us realize at least one of the things which, in the words of Secretary Lansing, we would have been 'let in for,' but for the restraining hand of the senate, and to fetch home to us the danger of committing our country in advance to causes that we know not of?

Not Our Purpose.

"One can have no quarrel with those who have convinced themselves that our underlying purpose in entering the great conflict was to create a league of nations. The fact remains, however, that no such intent was officially acclaimed, no allusion, nor even a suggestion to that effect appeared in the joint resolution of Congress which declared the existence of a state of war between this country and Germany. For myself I left no room for doubt of the motives which led me to cast my vote in favor of that resolution. It so happened that I made the concluding speech upon the war resolution, from my place in the senate, on the night of April 4, 1917. These were my own words at that time:

"'I want it known to the people of my state and to the nation that I am voting for war tonight for the maintenance of just American rights, which is the first essential to the preservation of the soul of this republic.

"'I vote for this joint resolution to make war, not a war thrust upon us, if I could choose the language of the resolution, but a war declared in response to affronts; a war that will at least put a soul into our American life; a war not for the cause of the allies of Europe; a war not for France, beautiful as the sentiment may be in reviving at least our gratitude to the French people; not precisely a war for civilization, worthy and inspiring as that would be; but a war that speaks for the majesty of a people properly governed, who finally are brought to the crucial test where they are resolved to get together and wage a conflict for the maintenance of their rights and the preservation of the covenant inherited from their fathers.

"We have given to the world the spectacle of a great nation that could make war without selfish intent. We unsheathed the sword some eighteen years ago for the first time in the history of the world, in the name of humanity, and we gave proof to the world at that time of an unselfish nation. Now, whether it is the fate, or fortune, or travail of destiny, it has come to us to unsheathe the sword again, not alone for humanity's sake—through that splendid inspiration will be involved—but to unsheathe the sword against a great power in the maintenance of the rights of the republic, in the maintenance which will give to us a new guaranty of nationality. That's the great thing, and I want it known, Mr. President and senators, that this is the impelling thought with me for one, when I cast my vote.'

For Same Guaranty Today.

"It is for that same 'guaranty of nationality' that I stand today, and shall continue to stand inflexibly, so long as I shall be permitted to live. The independence of our great republic is to me a priceless and sacred inheritance. Time was when an American did not hesitate to proclaim himself a patriot. To do so now, I am well aware, is sometimes to invite the sneers of cynicism. But why should any true American not be free to say: I am a patriot, wholly exalted to my country, which I hold to be God's best inspiration to man for higher attainment and the promotion of the world's best civilization?'

"But I have a special reason for making this reference today. I challenge the statement that the patriotism which holds America first comprehends either narrowness or selfishness, or as implying tacit suspicion and jealousy of other peoples.

"To assert, as some have asserted needlessly, that those of us who honestly believe that America can best serve all mankind as America, free and untrammeled, rather than as one in a pitiful minority among many states in merged world government, lack consciousness of the rightful demands of humanity, is to utter a gross and unpardonable libel. To attribute meanness to those of us who, in the performance of our public duty, refused to participate in what we sincerely regarded as a betrayal of our own country in the interest of others, is to discredit the intelligence and discrimination of the great mass of American people who directly, by their votes, put us in our positions of trust. For myself, I yield to no man in willingness, aye, in eagerness, to render the greatest conceivable assistance to the stricken peoples of Europe. I include all of them and speak with a genuinely sympathetic heart, whether it is to mention devastated France, or sorely-tried Italy, or nobly-struggling Poland, or distracted and misguided Russia, or gallant little Belgium, or pitiably deceived Austria, or the ruthless invader, Germany, which came to the supreme tragedy through a leadership which brought disaster to her misguided people.

"It was with that feeling of sympathy and desire to serve, that most reluctantly and with grave misgivings, as I announced at the time, I with reservations designed to preserve our essential liberty of action. The record is made, and under the same conditions, confronted by the same alternative, I should vote now as I voted then.

Conditions Have Changed.

"But the conditions have changed. Experience has brought enlightenment. We know now that the league constituted at Versailles is utterly impotent as a preventive of wars. It is so obviously impotent that it has not even been tried. The original league, mistakenly conceived and unreasonably insisted upon, has undoubtedly passed beyond the possibility of restoration. The maturer judgment of the world will be that it deserved to pass for the very simple reason that, contrary to all of the tendencies developed by the civilizing processes of the world, it rested upon the power of might, not of right.

"The assertion is made frequently that through the surrender of our nationality we might have saved the life of the covenant—that is to say, that, although twenty-eight nations could not make it function, one added to the twenty-eight would have achieved a glowing success, provided, always, that the one were America.

"This pays to America the tribute of exceptional influence, but I suggest that if the world is dependent upon our action to bring about the supreme realization, then we ought to have the say about our own freedom in participating therein. But let us consider what is meant by this reliance upon America. What can it signify if not that it is to the United States, and to the United States alone, that the other twenty-eight nations look for the bone and sinew, the money, the munitions and the men to sustain the entire organization, not as an agency of peace but as an armed force?

A Telling Admission.

"A few days ago a delegation of an organization which calls itself a Society for the Prevention of War appealed to the premier of Great Britain to unite and use the powers of the world in defense of Poland, Armenia and the Dardanelles. The British premier replied, according to his remarks quoted by the newspapers, to the effect that, while the formation of 'an international army' would be 'an ideal solution,' it could not be accomplished because the European nations could not furnish the troops and the United States had 'withdrawn from co-operation'—a polite and diplomatic phrase and more exactly meaning, of course, that the senate of the United States had not completed the partial obligation assumed by the President to do that very thing—that is, to 'furnish the troops.' Could a clearer indication of what would have been expected of this country as a member of the league be desired? Hardly. Some, too, think, or say they think, that this extraordinary service should be proffered. I do not agree with them, but, assuming that they are right, I venture to note that nothing stands in the way of performance. The President has only to call upon Congress to declare war, and to confer upon him specific authority to raise armies for the protection of the powers which, though recently associated with, are still foreign to our own republic.

"It is reasonably safe to assume, however, that the President will not pursue this course. Fortunately, he is under no compelling, moral obligation under the league to do so. His recent campaign experience, moreover, in asking Congress to send American boys to battle for ideals which hardly encourage repetition of a request abroad, convinces him quite firmly declined by the Congress. What then in like circumstances would be the answer of the British premier himself? In his own words addressing a meeting of the Canadian Liberals on August 12 last, according to the press reports, he said:

"'When the terrible question of peace or war has to be decided, our first duty as a government is to the people who trust us not to commit their treasure to any unjustifiable adventure. Nothing but the most imperative call of national honor, national safety and national freedom can justify war. Before this country is committed to it even in the most limited form, we must be satisfied that these are in peril.'

"I quote these telling words, my countrymen, with the utmost satisfaction, because with one amendment they express to a nicety my own position. I take for granted that the prime minister meant to include in 'treasure' the greatest treasure of all but, for myself, I should leave nothing to be inferred. Foremost and above all else to be safeguarded by those of us who hold the trust of the people, it goes without saying, but cannot be too often repeated, is the manhood of the nation.

Will Not Misuse Power.

"Now, it may appear to you that I have been speaking chiefly in the negative. I make the admission. What is more, I might continue to do so almost indefinitely without disadvantage to our cause. So many things have been done by the present expiring administration that no power on earth could induce me to do, that I cannot even attempt to recount them. I may remark casually, however, that if I should be, as I fully expect to be, elected President of this just and honorable republic, I will not empower an assistant secretary of the navy to draft a constitution for helpless neighbors in the West Indies and jam it down their throats at the point of bayonets borne by United States marines. We have a higher service for our gallant marines than that. Nor will I misuse the power of the executive to cover with a veil of secrecy repeated acts of unwarranted interference in domestic affairs of the little republics of the western hemisphere, such as in the past few years have not only made enemies of those who should be our friends, but have rightfully discredited our country as their trusted neighbor.

Will Submit to No Wrong.

"On the other hand, I will not or shall not, as you prefer, submit to any wrong against any American citizen, with respect to either his life or his property, by any government. This statement is made in all solemnity, with enmity for none and friendship for all. If it particularly applies to Mexico, the application has been directed by the robbery and murder of hundreds of our own people in that unhappy country who were lawfully there and were entitled to protection. One must admit that these outrages upon Americans are largely the consequences of the wiggling and wobbling, the supine waiting of our own government, though the admission neither helps the hurt, nor gives the hope of security for the future while the present administration remains in power, or when one in 'complete accord' succeeds it.

"This admonition is not directed exclusively toward our next door neighbor to whom we would gladly hold forth a helping hand, and whom primarily, certainly in preference to far off peoples in Europe, Asia and Africa, it is our manifest duty to serve with a whole heart and generous tolerance. It is intended for a plain notice to every government on the face of the earth that the entire resources of this nation are pledged to maintain the sacredness of American lives and the just protection of American properties.

Line of Demarcation Plain.

"The line of demarcation between our attitude and that of our political opponents is perfectly plain. The president has made his position clear by his acts no less than by his words. Twice there came to him an opportunity to obtain ratification at the hands of the senate and twice he put the opportunity aside, because he would not accept reservations designed solely to safeguard American rights. He still holds Article 10 to be the heart of the covenant. So does the Democratic platform. So does the Democratic nominee. To assume that the nominee would accept the reservations rejected by the President and denounced by the party platform is to impugn his integrity. To insinuate, as those who in proclaiming themselves for the Democratic candidate and 'the league with reservations' do insinuate that he would pursue such a course in seeking ratification is not to pay him a compliment, but rather to challenge his sincerity.

"For myself I do not question for a moment the truth of what the Democratic nominee says on this subject. He has flatly said we are in favor of going in on the basis announced by the President. I am not. Here is the whole difference between us, but it is a most vital one, because it involves the disparity between a world court of justice supplemented by a world association for conference on the one hand, and the council of the league, on the other.

BERT LYTELL Metro Star

"Out of my sight! You re as guilty as hell!" These were the contemptuous words the attorney shot at the man he had just cleared of a murder charge. Why? Yet had you known the attorney —Charley Steele, dashing, impeccable in his dress, possessed at once of a compelling magnetism and charm and maddening superciliousness—you might have expected it. He is the principal character in the Metro Picture

MAY RETURN TO WORK

(By United Press)

New York, Sept 1—Striking employes of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company planned to take up the proposition of returning to work, provided settlement of their wage demands is assured through arbitration Union leaders declared the proposal would not be accepted, and that the strike, which for two days has almost completely tied up surface, subway, and elevated traffic in Brooklyn, would continue

The company today started few surface cars, all heavily screened and policed, and promised an increase in the number of elevated and subway trains

(By United Press.)

London, Sept 1.—Transfusion of blood is the only means by which the life of Terence Macswiney, hunger-striking lord mayor of Cork, can be saved, it was said today by physicians at Brixton prison

The lord mayor was in a semi-comatose condition most of last night. He has grown much more emaciated during the last few hours During one of his periods of consciousness he sent greetings through his brother Sean, to the hunger-striking Irish prisoners in Cork.

Meat Packers Proposal Disaproved

(By United Press.)

Washington, Sept. 1—The proposal of big meat packers to sell their control in principal stock yards to a $30,000,000 holding company met with disapproval by Federal trade commissioner Colver and the League of Women Voters today.

At the department of justice it was thought the plan will not be accepted a though final decision will be up to Attorney General Palmer. The packers agreed with Palmer to divest themselves of stock yards and so-called unrelated side-lines and the proposal filed in court is part of the carrying out of that agreement.

Under the proposal packer holdings in 15 yards and terminal railroads would be sold to a holding company organized by F H Prince and Co, of Boston the packers to have something less than a fifty per cent interest in the company

Colver, who headed the federal trade investigation of the packers and recommended legislatory legislation said of the proposal:

"The most interesting part of this proposed adjustment to me is the reappearance of [illegible] H Prince upon the stage It was Prince, who with Armour, succeeded in absolutely concealing the ownership of the Chicago stock yards so that nobody on earth has been able to know who the owners were or are This was accomplished by the use of the bearer warrants, a thing which can defeat all income tax laws, all anti-trust laws and any court decree

"This bearer warrant and its use are fully described by me in chapter five of part three of the federal trade commissioner's report on the meat packing industry and I have enjoyed the opportunity of explaining it in detail to several congressmen all of which may be found in at least four public documents"

Miss Jessie Haver, legislative agent of the league of women voters, which has two million members, condemned the whole method of proceeding against the packers in the courts.

New York, Sept 1—Patrolman John Gage thought it strange that a husky looking young man should have such tiny feet so he called the wagon The man" turned out to be a girl who said she was masquerading to dodge an unwelcome suitor.
